DETAILED ACTION

Applicants are requested to provide the serial number and to update the status of related application on page 1 of the specification.

A new title that is more aptly descriptive of the invention claimed is requested.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the disclosed invention is inoperative and therefore lacks utility.

The invention is inoperative because every time when the user use the application program the specified commands contained in the application program are also executed. The specified commands therefore cause the application program to suspend every time when the user uses the application program.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is not clear how the upgrade means is related to execution of another application program.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mohammed (USP 6,418,555).

See at least the abstract in Mohammed. Mohammed teaches:

Claims 1, 5

A communication terminal device comprising:

communication means for communicating with a provider of an application program via a communication network (inherent, definition of upgrade, see the last three lines of [0004] in Applicants' specification: downloading a new application program and overwriting the pre-existing application program with the new application program is referred to as "upgrading", downloading requires communication and therefore is inherent); execution means (inherent in a computer, see also “executable” in line 2 of Mohammed’s abstract) for executing an application program, and for executing specified commands (see: “a program executable in the system to automatically upgrade the software component” in line 2-3 of the abstract, also see: detection module in line 5 of the abstract) contained in said application program;

suspend means (inherent, it is well known that application program is required to be suspended while it is being upgrade) for suspending operation of said executed application program when said specified commands are executed by said execution means; and upgrade means for upgrading said application program by communicating, by said communication means, with said provider of an application program whose operation is suspended by said suspend means.

The only difference is that Applicants’ suspended means is for suspending the application program every time a user uses the application program. For the reason set forth in the Section 101 Rejection above, no statement can be made as to which component in Mohammed corresponds to the suspend means.

Claim 2

The upgrade program in Mohammed also causes the execution means to execute an application program after completing upgrade of the application program because the user in Mohammed also wants to continue use the upgraded and other application programs in the system.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 3 and 4 appear to contain allowable subject matter. However, because of the Section 101 Rejection, no statement can be made as to whether they are allowable.
